Closely Held and Family Businesses

The vast majority of medium-sized companies, and also large companies and economic groups in our country, are controlled by business families or private holdings. There is no doubt, in our experience, that the companies that have developed and been consolidated over time are those that have managed to adequately combine the three areas that revolve around them: property, family and management.

Over the years, our firm has participated in the purchase and sale of both family offices and holdings, as well as in the development and implementation of corporate and family governance structures that have facilitated the peaceful and orderly incorporation of new Investors or new generations into the ownership and management of a family business, thus allowing them to last over time.

Each holding or family office has its own characteristics and realities, demanding “tailored” solutions. In this regard, our firm has lawyers with vast experience in corporate (preparation of ad-hoc corporate by-laws, shareholder agreements, family protocols, etc.), tax (design of an efficient property structure; corporate reorganization) and inheritance matters (advice on the drafting and preparation of wills), which allows us to provide comprehensive advice and high added value in these matters.

White Collar and Compliance

We provide advice to companies on both the prevention of and the decision-making in reaction to crimes or administrative infringements, such as internal fraud, questioning from prosecuting authorities or fraud to third parties. Contingencies of this nature create highly complex situations that require adequate retrieval of the facts, which are generally contained within large volumes of information. We work to allow our clients to make the most appropriate decisions for each specific case.

We represent our clients in court in criminal proceedings, and we develop internal investigations in order to discover the scope of each contingency, collecting all available information and, according to each case, designing and developing defenses against accusations from the authorities, and preparing complaints or suits against third parties. Our multidisciplinary team allows us to provide creative, sophisticated and realistic solutions in order to protect our clients from internal or external threats or risks.

We also provide compliance services for the implementation and monitoring of compliance models within the framework of Law 20,393 on criminal liability of legal entities, and we look for risk control mechanisms that are strong, efficient and consistent with the reality of each company. We strive to accompany our clients in the development of their operations so that they comply with regulations at all times and so that a culture of compliance is effectively instilled in their administrators and employees.

Our work in compliance consultancy includes:

- continuous advice to our clients on compliance with current regulations and their relationships with suppliers and clients, as support for their legal managers and compliance officers;
- continuous training of their officials, through lectures and instructions on risks related to different types of crimes;
- the design, implementation and monitoring of compliance models; and
- the identification of potential or current risks of crimes that could be committed.

Competition / Antitrust

This area represents our clients in and out of court in order to ensure that their economic activities comply with the rules that regulate antitrust, fair competition and consumer protection. Our mission is to provide advice to our clients – and in particular their commercial departments – with an especially economic and business-minded approach, so that they can carry out their business in a way that encourages competition, identifying areas that may eventually create contingencies, and protecting their interests before the National Economic Prosecutor's Office (FNE) and the Competition Court (TDLC).

The advice we provide focuses on the following matters:

Control of mergers and concentration operations, where we work jointly and in coordination with the team in charge of the transaction to analyze possible anti-competitive risks and create a structure that successfully neutralizes or mitigates those risks, as well as processing consultations with the TDLC and presentations to the FNE (including the negotiation of out of court agreements); representation in contentious and non-contentious cases before the TDLC in relation to the most diverse aspects of business, such as collusive, exclusive or discriminatory practices, pricing, vertical restrictions, unfair competition, abuse of dominant position, among others; intellectual property matters; and daily advice on compliance issues, where we exercise a more preventive role in order to avoid possible contingencies or sources of conflict that may cause litigation or questioning by the authorities, collaborating with the structuring of the client's business model and its practices.

Our firm has advised clients in several industries, such as pharmaceutical; air; land and sea transport; infrastructure; energy; media; medical and health services; retail; foods; products for mass consumption; technology and commerce.

Asia-Pacific Desk

Our specialized area has spent more than 15 years working on creating a relationship with East Asia, facilitating business to and from the region. In 2004, we started with China, organizing the “Doing Business in China” seminar in Chile, to which several Chinese law firms and the president of the Chinese Bar Association, the All China Lawyers Association, were invited.

Considering the challenges presented by this region, we have actively taken part in the IPBA (Inter Pacific Bar Association), also inviting other Latin American jurisdictions to join. In addition, we have frequently visited clients, foreign investment authorities and law firms in the region, cultivating friendly relationships and camaraderie.

Our firm has formed a relationship with the Chinese Embassy in Chile and our country’s embassy in China, serving clients from the most diverse areas of the economy who turn to their respective diplomatic representatives in search of a legal advisor or legal counsel. Considering this, we also actively collaborated with the Chinese Bar Association to participate in the Chilean Chapter of the prestigious guide published by said organization, titled “Legal Environment Report of the Belt and Road Countries” (2018/2019).

We have supported Chinese companies in Chile from the beginning, both in the process of setting up a permanent establishment in the country, and in the day-to-day legal advice; we have also advised them in public and private tenders, transactions, mergers and acquisitions, EPC and AOM contracts. We have a list of relevant Asian clients, available upon request.

We understand that the challenge goes beyond legal advice to our Asian clients. We understand the difficulties they have with the Chilean culture, language and legal regulations, and we are at their side to help them with issues that they may not have noticed, trying to be as proactive as possible, regarding both Chilean legal regulations, and legislative projects, public policies, the functioning of institutions, the identification of relevant authorities, the regulatory framework of the business they will develop, and any other issue relevant to their operation.

In very little time, we became these companies’ trusted legal advisors in Chile, providing direct, personal, honest and generous treatment that has endured over the years, going beyond mere legal services.

Our firm has provided comprehensive advice for large infrastructure projects, such as construction of roads, ports, dams, hospitals and prisons, either as advisors to a single participant, or as advisors to a consortium that includes local members as well as foreign partners.

In each of these projects we have participated both in their initial phases, including advice on complex bidding processes for concessions of public, municipal or private works, and in the subsequent acquisition or sale of shares of projects already in progress. In both cases, our advice includes the different steps and aspects of the process, including project financing, regulatory, environmental, administrative, tax, corporate and contractual matters, antitrust regulations, unfair competition, insolvency and the associated insurance, as well as specific regulatory aspects that govern each particular project, and the relationship management and representation of the project owner before the competent authorities.

Regarding transport, our firm has provided comprehensive advice, and also advice on specific aspects of the sectoral legislation, to important transnational air and maritime transport companies, and to important local companies in land transport, including multimodal transport companies or logistics services. We have also extended our advice to the application of possible international conventions and international treaties of a bilateral, regional or multilateral nature, as well as the application of mandatory and supplementary rules regarding responsibility of carriers, available insurance and the relationship management and representation of these companies before the competent authorities.
